Be A Citizens Review Panel Volunteer

Trained volunteers protect donor investment.

United Way of the CSRA Citizens Review panels are composed entirely of community volunteers and are responsible for visiting United Way's partner agencies annually to review the funded programs and services as well as make funding recommendations annually in our Community Investment Process. These panels are vital in maintaining United Way agency credibility and accountability to the community while ensuring the community outcomes are being effectively evaluated.

What do citizen review volunteers do in just 12-15 hours each year?

- Receive training on how we conduct our Community Investment Process and what is expected of them in this role.
- Review agency proposals and financial statements.
- Conduct agency site visits.
- Recommend funding allocations for each program for the Board of Directors' approval.

What do I need to do this job?

- Dedication to service
- Passion for our community.
- Desire to be a change agent.
